Negro Bound Over for Murder of Wallace

Baby Safe, Work Received at Noon

Ed Washington Is Held Without Bail By Judge Gentry

Second Negro, Henry Wyatt, Also in Jail as Murder Suspect

MUD TRACKS, CLUE

One Arrest by Sheriff—Second by Jim Bearden, Special Investigator

Ed Washington, Spring Hill negro suspected in the murder of Alfred Wallace, white storekeeper, which occurred last month on the Patmos-Doolley's Ferry road, was bound over to the Hempstead county grand jury late Wednesday without bond, following a hearing before Municipal Judge U. A. Gentry.

Washington was arrested by Sheriff John L. Wilson and officers some time ago when indictment of the suspect's feet indicated he might have been the man who left well-defined footprints in the soft mud about the scene where Wallace's body was found one winter morning by a school-girl.

Robbed and Murdered

Robbery was given as the motive for the aged storekeeper's murder.

Wednesday's court hearing revealed that officers have had two negroes in jail for some time, both being listed as suspects.

The other negro, Henry Wyatt, also of the Spring Hill community, was picked up at the request of Jim Bearden, special investigator who had been retained by members of the Wallace family from Mississippi.

Wednesday's case was brought against Washington, with Wyatt held nominally as a suspect, but actually as a witness against Washington, Sheriff Wilson told this paper.

Muddy Tracks Are Clue

The sheriff said that officers investigating the tracks in the mud on the murder scene found that Wyatt's feet were too big to have made them; but Washington's feet appeared to tally with the tracks.

Washington, represented by Attorneys Carrigan & Monroe, went into Wednesday's hearing in an attempt to show that the state had no real evidence to prove he was anywhere near the scene at the time the murder was committed.

The state was represented by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney John Vesey.

To Rule On Loans To Closed Banks

Mr. Norwood to Decide If Liquidating Agents May Pledge Assets

LITTLE ROCK—The Arkansas office of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation probably will begin receiving loan applications from closed banks within a few days, it was said Tuesday after a telegram had been received from Washington announcing that the National Board is ready to consider such applications.

The telegram, sent by Alfred G. Kahn, president of the Union Trust Company and chairman of the Arkansas Advisory Board, who is in Washington conferring with members of the National Board, said that consideration of applications from closed banks will depend upon a ruling by state legal authorities as to whether liquidating agents have a right to pledge assets of such banks as security for loans for the benefit of depositors.

Attorney General Hal L. Norwood was asked for an opinion on the question but through a misunderstanding as to who was to ask for the opinion, the request did not reach him until late in the afternoon. Mr. Norwood said he will look into the matter Wednesday.

Sam J. Wilson, liquidating agent for the American Exchange Trust Company, said Tuesday that everything is in readiness to present the application of that bank as soon as the state Advisory Board is ready to consider it. The amount of the loan sought will depend upon the amount of assets made available to pledge as collateral through filing of financial statements by makers and endorsers of notes, Mr. Wilson said. He said that replies to requests for such statements have been slow in coming in and that a greater number is needed immediately to be presented with the application for a loan.

J. W. Jarrett, manager of the Little Rock agency of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said open banks will be filed this week.

HELSINKI, Finland—(AP)—Finland's Fascist rebels, the Lapua, held the town of Mantala, 35 miles from the capital, Tuesday night and a government trap set at Hamenlinna, 70 miles away, failed to bag any conspirators.

Although the government announced that it believed the movement was well in hand, a regiment of soldiers arrived in the capital from Turku, in southwest Finland, to strengthen the army here. Other military contingents, all of which the government said had remained loyal, remained ready to act if further outbreaks occurred.

Two members of the cabinet, Social Minister Kilpelainen and Assistant Home Minister Solja, both of whom are Japamen, Tuesday offered their resignations to President Pehr Evind Svinhufvud. They heretofore formed the opposition bloc in the cabinet.

There was no word today of the clash between Fascist bands and government troops in the mantala area, which was reported to have occurred yesterday.

One man who succeeded in getting through to the capital from Mantala, held by the rebels, said he saw only a few rebels armed with rifles and that they had little ammunition.

He described the rebels as "light-hearted youth" who believed their surrender would be arranged easily with the government to prevent bloodshed, and who hoped that rebellious events would cause the fall of the present ministry.

Part-Pay Offered On City Licenses

Council Votes to Split $2.50 Fee Into $1.25 Semi-Annually

Emulating the State Highway Department's action in providing a part payment plan for the purchase of state auto licenses, the Hope city council Tuesday night authorized the payment of city license fees, which are $2.50 a year, in two semi-annual installments of $1.25 each.

Introduced by Alderman Ira Hall, the resolution granting this authority to the city clerk, was adopted 6 to 2.

The motion was opposed by Alderman W. A. Lewis and Roy Stephenson, on the grounds that $2.50 was too small a sum to be handled in part-payments. It was their contention that the doubling up of bookkeeping would cost the city more than the convenience offered the motorist would be worth.

The council appointed Mrs. R. N. Berry, widow of the late supervisor of trash collection, to her husband's position for a period of two months.

Tornado insurance in the amount of $45,000 was ordered taken out on the municipal water and light plant.

The Japanese Army

The Japanese army in China seems to be very much like any other army, offhand. Its organization is about the same as the arms are the same, and it follows the same kind of strategy and tactics that European and American armies follow.

But once in a while a little news dispatch will reveal the Japanese soldier as a creature of a different species; a hold-up man as it were, from a warlike age which seems to survive elsewhere on earth.

A few days ago dispatches from Shanghai said that the Japanese commander there found himself without sufficient troops to make his offensive succeed. And European or American general in that position would have called at once for more men, and would have kept on calling until he got them.

But the Japanese commander never let out a peep. Why? Because the old code of the Samurai forbade him to. His superior had given him this assignment, and he would be unworthy if, having begun it, he appealed for help.

A day or so after that bit of news came a cable to the New York Times telling how three Japanese infantrymen had sacrificed themselves to destroy a barbed-wire barrier that was holding up their battalion.

They strapped about their chests and waists huge quantities of high explosives, and then ran forward boldly and engaged themselves in the barbed wire. The Chinese instantly shot them, the bullets touched off the explosives, and the wire entanglements were blown to bits—as, of course, were the three Japanese infantrymen.

These soldiers, by the way, had volunteered for that job. It is hard to imagine either of these incidents happening in a present-day European or American army. We on this side of the Pacific simply don't think that way any longer. The attitude that makes such quixotic bits of old-time chivalry possible stems from the middle ages. We have gone beyond it.

But Japan is still half medieval. The old warrior caste there still looks on life as it did ten centuries ago. The present war, indeed, may prove its last fight; but while it lasts a code that the rest of us lost long ago is still operating.

The Twentieth Amendment

The twentieth amendment is about to be added to the Constitution of the United States, and if you aren't familiar with its provisions it would pay you to find out something about it.

It is commonly called the "lame duck" amendment. It would do away with governmental machinery that was devised for an age of stage-coaches and horse-drawn canal barges, and it would bring things at Washington up to date.

First of all, it would move the presidential inauguration ahead from March 4 to early in January. More important, it would similarly move ahead the date on which a newly-elected Congress takes office—thereby doing away with the scandalous "lame duck" sessions, in which congressmen whose constituents have turned them down still have power to make laws. It would end the possibility of filibusters in Congress and it would make the government vastly more responsive to the will of the electorate.

Thirty-six state legislatures must ratify it if it is to carry. Not one valid reason can be advanced against it; many weighty reasons can be put forward in its favor. It ought to be ratified without delay.

Buying Public Favor

WHEN Gene Tunney, former world champion, wrote his story of his climb to success, he happened to mention how he was forced to give up a percentage of his receipts to sport writers before he could get into the "big money." There is no doubt who can achieve fame and fortune, regardless of his ability in the ring, who isn't taken up by a group of sport writers, an d who demand their toll if they make a fighter great, and get the public into the notion of paying heavy tribute to see him in action.

It's the old story of propaganda. Fame must be bought. Sport agents must be hired. The name of the famous must be sold far and wide, and over and over again.

Tunney told how the sport writers drew a percentage of his engagements. It was generally known for years that this was an old Gotham custom. Nobody before had put it down in cold print over his signature.

It isn't important as a single instance, because it only adds to the prize fight racket, and it doesn't make so much difference what happens as between fighting racketeers and sport writers.

But it does give the people an insight to the power of propaganda and publicity, and hints of what takes place in boxing, and in other rackets. Buying public acclaim.

Hundreds of millions of dollars are spent annually in the United States to get an editor's desk. Most of it is thrown away. But some of it is used. The propagandist takes his is destined to imagine the money wasted in various forms of propaganda. Occasionally it pays. Hot Springs

Livestock Shows Increase in State

Larger Number Reflects Interest Shown by Farmers of Arkansas

The number of all livestock on Arkansas farms, except horses and mules, was increased at the beginning of this year over a year ago, according to the livestock report recently released by the United States Department of Agriculture. The increase in number of hogs on farms in the state was 45 per cent over last year. There was a 10 per cent increase in all cattle on farms and the same increase of cows and heifers, 2 years old and over, kept for milk, and more than 5 per cent increase in heifers from one to two years old being kept for milk cows. An increase of 5 per cent in the number of sheep and lambs on Arkansas farms was reported. The number of horses and mules on farms in the state, decreased about 2 per cent.

The increase in cattle, hogs, and sheep reflects the interest that farmers now have in livestock and the efforts being made to enlarge the herds as a means of using the abundant feed crop produced last year, states T. Roy Reid, assistant director, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture Extension Service. It emphasizes the necessity for a still further increase in acreage of feed crops on farms in Arkansas this year in order to supply the needs of still further increased number due to the growth of these herds during the year.

The number of livestock on farms is not sufficient to meet the needs for animals on the farm as a part of a permanent and profitable farming system, but there is a tendency to still further increase the numbers, now, points out Mr. Reid.

In $30,000 "Baby Hoax" Probe

A strange story of an alleged "baby hoax" was revealed when Mr. Chauncey Smith, right, Kenmore, N. Y., widow, was arrested at Cleveland, Ohio, on a technical charge of kidnapping Baby Terry Tower, left, a foundling. Mrs. Smith claims the baby is her own, but police charge she is childless and seeks to share in a $30,000 legacy which her father-in-law provided would be settled on the family of his son, Chauncey, if there were any children.

It took that reliable, straight-thinking philosopher, Will Rogers, to explode the myth that indiscriminate spending would bring back prosperity.

Real prosperity is built on the twin solid rocks of normal spending and normal savings. Buy normally, but remember to save normally, too.

Mrs. Sid Henry
Do you wish the world were better?
Well, suppose we make a start
By accumulating wisdom
In the scrap book of our hearts;
Do not waste one page on folly;
Live to learn, and learn to live;
If we want to give men knowledge
We must get it, ere we give.
Do you wish the world were happy?
Then remember day by day
Just to scatter seeds of kindness
As we pass along the way;
For the pleasures of the many
May be oftentimes tried to one,
As the hand that plants an acorn
Shelters armies from the sun.

Sharps and Flats

A Department in Which The Editor of The Star Plays His Own Piano

I owe one of the enterprising Star writers an apology. It was he—a young married man—who wrote that story on my bachelors Leap Year day last Monday.

The story caused much amusement, and to my dismay, also produced a mystery. You must recall that last paragraph:

"Many of The Star readers will notice that the name of one eligible single man of Hope has been omitted. But the Leap Year reporter did not wish to join the army of the unemployed, and so this name has not been included."

But this name was included. He was referring to Sharps & Flats; and also and eluding, having seen that the young bachelor, circulation manager's name, was going into print I wanted to be perfectly fair so I wrote mine into the list also—forgetting to change the last paragraph of the story.

If the mystery was hung on some other single man, just step this way, sir, and we'll print your name.

They tell me these are difficult times indeed. The darkies don't sing in the fields any more. Even the bookkeepers are hit by the depression. There used to be a country storekeeper who came to town every Saturday and put in his order at a Hope wholesale house for fruit-jars, sugar and shorts. So regular was he, and his order never varied, that all the young bachelors in the wholesale office had to do was holler back to the clerk on the loading platform, "Mr. Blank's order!" And the clerk shouted it on to his assistant:

"Sugar, shorts—and fruit-jars!" But there's no comedy any more on the loading platform. The old storekeeper's trips became very irregular, and after a while he died.

But hard times are not so much a matter of statistics as the temper of the people.

I am starting this spring my tenth year in Arkansas. Most of those years were good. But I have observed that good or bad, every January and February made most of the people feel that the country was going to perdition and never would recover.

Especially so this winter, with its record rains. But as I write this we have just completed ten days of beautiful weather—worth a million dollars to our people and our state as we begin another planting season. This man who talked to me so gloomily two weeks ago, is today a different person.

Statistics don't make hard times. A statistician could make a nation feel blue at the peak of prosperity by pointing out that the people owed more than they ever would pay for. But a statistician is of no more real consequence than an historian. Neither of them makes events. It is the heart and courage of the people that makes history—the historian only writes about it. That's something to remember. If you feel optimistic this spring—time—remember that you have the eternal right to be optimistic.

Wedding Day Near for Prince's Fiancee

It's for the love of smiling Karin Nissvandt (left), daughter of a Stockholm industrialist, that Prince Lennart of Sweden will renounce his royal title and become plain "Mr. Bernadotte." They are to be married soon. Here the bride-to-be is shown with her prospective mother-in-law, the former Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, as they posed for a new picture taken in the Swedish capital.

Honolulu Convict Confesses Attack

Japanese Servant Girl the Latest Victim of Crime Epidemic in Islands

HONOLULU—(AP)—Speedy action by police, houses and courts Tuesday following the latest assault upon a woman on Oahu Island, landed John Fernandez, 21-year-old former convict, in jail under indictment for the offense eight hours after the attack.

After Fernandez allegedly confessed the attack on a Japanese servant girl near the home of her employer, Harold Castle, the former convict was taken before the Grand Jury, indicted and held without bond.

The crime occurred three days after an attack on the wife of a navy enlisted man and nine days before the scheduled trial of four Americans charged with the slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, one of the four accused of attacking the wife of Naval Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, September 12.

All police organizations on the island and many citizens joined in a frenzied search for the attacker. Fernandez was arrested soon after the search started. The woman had given police a detailed description of her assailant.

Fernandez was taken to the emergency hospital for examination by Sgt. Dewey Mookini and Arthur McDuffie, private detective, who informed Chief Weeber the captured man had confessed.

Tuesday's attack, begun in daylight, differed from the assault Saturday on Mrs. Kathleen Hope, wife of a navy machinist's mate. She was attacked in her home at night by a masked man and police had few clues to follow.

Repeated attack cases in Honolulu were described today as an "epidemic" by Wallace R. Farrington, former governor of Hawaii.

"Honolulu is facing the problem of this epidemic of assault cases just as it faced in years gone by epidemics

Cardinal Hayes in Southland

The trial, set for March 10, probably will be delayed until the arrival of Chicago's defense attorney, who said Tuesday he would leave Chicago March 15 for Honolulu to participate in the defense.

Montgomery Wilm of the defense counsel said he would file a motion for a continuance until April 1. Mrs. J. A. Ripley of New York, sister of Mrs. Fortesque, arrived Tuesday to be with her sister during the trial.

The University of Michigan is ardent among the "joiners" of educational institutions, holding membership in 56 different organizations.

Stolen Gold Lures Hunter, Devotes Life to Digging

Calvin Disney

HARROGATE, Tenn.—(NEA)—Life for Calvin Disney, 36-year-old Cumberland mountain man, is just a lot of dirty digs.

He lives in a cave high in the hills near here, and for the past three years he has done nothing but pick and shovel work with an $85,000 hidden treasure as his goal.

Additional Data on Short Selling Asked

NEW YORK—(AP)—Coinciding with the start of the senate finance committee hearings on short selling, the New York stock exchange Tuesday called on its members for additional data on that practice.

In a special bulletin issued Tuesday morning, the exchange asks that all members forward to its committee of business conduct information as of February on the following points:

1. The total number of accounts in which there is a short position.
2. The number of such accounts, in each state of the United States.
3. The name of the owner of each such account in alphabetical order and the number of shares of each stock short in it.

The stock exchange instructs that such information be forwarded to it "as soon as possible but in any event not later than March 7."

Vote of Thanks

PHILADELPHIA—Scientists at the Moore School of Electrical Engineering of the University of Pennsylvania deserve a vote of thanks if their arrangement of weights to prevent ships rolling and resulting seasickness is successful. This system uses hifting weights instead of gyroscopic action to reduce rolls of ships.

ing the Civil war. The robbers, he believes, took to the mountains and hid their gold in a cave because of the perilous times.

The war eliminated the robbers from enjoyment of the money and now Disney, who says he has a may which will lead him to the payroll, is busy exploring the cave.

He is confident that he ultimately will turn up the spot where the $85,000 in gold is cached, and when he does he plans to hang up his pick and shovel and spend the rest of his life in mountain ease.

Dog Keeps Vigil by Body of Master

LUSK, Wyo.—(AP)—The vigil that a small mongrel dog kept for a week beside the body of his master has led to the discovery of the body of Mauritz Aronstein, pioneer Wyoming prospector.

The body was found Sunday near Aronstein's mine, in Muskrat canyon, 75 years old, had been subject to heart disease.

Ranchers who passed on the road near the old prospector's camp since Monday had noticed the little dog standing on a knoll, barking, apparently in an effort to attract attention.

The dog, stuck to his post and continued to bark whenever anyone passed on the road and neighbors finally investigated.

Body of Convict Taken From River in Texas

WEST COLUMBIA, Tex.—(AP)—The body of an unidentified man, believed to have been a convict escaped from the Ramsey state prison farm, was recovered Tuesday from the Brazos river by four residents of the community.

The body was discovered more than a week ago. It was lashed to a tree while a man went for officers. When they returned, the river had risen to a point where the body could not be reached.

Justice of the Peace J. L. Main said the clothing on the body was that of a prisoner and that stamped on one shoe was the convict number "1432." He added officials of the Ramsey farm would be here Tuesday afternoon to identify the body.

My mother told me she thought I should try Cardui. Soon after I began taking it I noticed an improvement, so I kept on until I had taken three bottles. By this time I was feeling so much better, the pain and soreness were gone." Sold at drug stores.

Stephens Store Is Robbed; $150 Taken

Merchandise Valued at $150 Missing in Robbery Friday Night

Merchandise estimated at $150 was stolen from the H. M. Stephens General Merchandise store of Blevins Friday night. The thieves gained the entrance to the building by breaking a window in the rear of the store. A crude ladder was made by the robbers and used for them to climb up to the window. The back doors and a side door were found open by employees of the store when they came to work Saturday morning. The loot consisted of dry goods, piece goods, hosiery, shirts, dress trousers, overalls, possibly some shoes and approximately 75 pounds of meat, all that they had in the store. A sack of Irish potatoes and a sack of radish seed were emptied on the floor of the store, the robbers using the sacks to carry away the merchandise. Officers were called to the scene, but no clue leading to the identity of the robbers has been found.

The dime-a-dance girl

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 ELLLEN ROSENBERG, a beautiful girl, was born in a small town in Poland. She lived with her mother, MOLLY ROSENBERG, and her father, BEN ROSENBERG, who was a well-known actor. She was a very beautiful girl, and she was very popular. She was a very beautiful girl, and she was very popular. She was a very beautiful girl, and she was very popular.

change in Ellen, had seen her growing pale and listless even as she burned with energy. Steven had suffered with her. Toward the middle of the second week he called Ellen into his office. He spoke directly.

"I thought you trusted me," he began.

"But I do, sir," Ellen protested uncomfortably.

"Then don't call me sir," he said.

"It's just habit. I won't do it again, sir."

They both laughed. After that it was easier. All at once Ellen saw Steven Barclay again, saw him in all his kindness and gentleness for the first time in weeks. During that time she had hurried engagements with him but always his image had been blurred by the image of the man who was absent.

"You're working yourself to death and I won't have it," Steven said sternly. "I'm too fond of you to see you deliberately drive yourself to a nervous collapse."

ELLEN found his anxiety comforting, found it sweet to forget the fears and fevers which had consumed her and to be wrapped in this infinite gentleness. She roused abruptly.

"It won't be for long now," she said with a grateful smile. "Two weeks from tomorrow I'm giving up my job at Dreamland. I've slacked at the store, I know, I've been so tired but I'll do better soon."

"Give up both jobs tomorrow," Steven suggested suddenly. "Give them up and marry me. Let me take you to Switzerland where it's always cool and the whole world plays. Let me give you leisure. Let me take over the responsibilities that are wearing you to a shadow."

Switzerland in midsummer. Molly and Mike cared for, Myra able to marry—oh, it was an alluring vision to the weary, heavy-eyed girl. She saw herself with the world for a playground, saw at her side a man who adored her, a man who could give her everything except the will-o'-wisp she had fancied the found in Larry Harrowgate's laughing eyes.

"I can't do it," Ellen whispered.

For the first time Steven experienced the sharp shock of jealousy. He asked in deadly earnestness the question Larry Harrowgate not three weeks before had put so lightly.

"Ellen, is there someone else?"

"Not now," she muttered.

The tawny head came up. "There never was," she amended desperately, wary eyes on Barclay's face lest he should read her shame and pain.

Steven dared not continue. He watched her as she murmured a goodby and slipped away from his office. That was on Wednesday. Ellen pleaded off from her duties at Dreamland and went directly to the store to the Brooklyn apartment. Molly, stretched out on a couch in the cool blast of a tiny, noisy electric fan, greeted her languidly, closed her eyes and was asleep again.

Ellen bathed, changed into a house frock and pulled her mop of hair straight back from her forehead, rigorously taming the rebellious curls at the nape of her neck.

By that time Myra was home from the library. They were having a cold supper. She and Myra prepared it in the kitchen, the coolest room in the apartment because of its northern exposure. Myra chopped ice for the tea and made thin bread and butter sandwiches. Ellen sliced chilled tomatoes, cucumbers and onions and daintily rubbed the salad bowl with a button of garlic, speared on the end of a fork.

"It's nice to have you back again," Myra observed, smiling at her sister's cautious efforts to avoid being smeared with the garlic.

"Funny, I have the same sort of feeling," Ellen said absently. "We don't seem to have had any real talks for weeks. It's been too hot for anything."

"Well, it will be September soon."

"It's hard to believe that it will ever snow again and that we'll freeze running for the subway, isn't it?"

ELLEN sighed at the thought of chrysanthemums and football games and days when hot chocolate would seem delicious. Incredible tonight that great fires would roar again, that snow would come pelting through the air, that violas would be worn on fur!

She poured olive oil and cider vinegar into the yellow mixing bowl and sprinkled paprika with a lavish hand. As she began the blending she remarked with studied carelessness:

"Miss Bowes is back from Europe."

"I saw it in the paper," Myra replied unwillingly. "But you don't care so much do you, honey?"

"Oh, no. I don't care."

Ellen went at the salad dressing with such vigor that the oil and vinegar separated and she had to blend them together with an egg. She made so much noise further conversation was impossible. But when the dressing was blended and perfect she spoke once more, carelessly this time.

"Steven Barclay asked me to marry him again today."

"That's not news," Myra laughed, covering the awkwardness she felt.

"The news is," Ellen remarked somberly, "that a single feather would have shoved me over the edge and I'd have accepted."

"There's no sense advising people," Myra began, "but just the same I'm going to put in my own little honest thought that women whose husbands love them too much are usually happier than when—well, when it's the other way around," she concluded.

"Maybe," Ellen responded briefly.

They decided to eat in the kitchen because the room was cool, Molly came in presently, dewy-eyed and freshly bathed. Mike burst in from the street, his face red as fire, his hair burnt almost straw color. Ellen had never seen him look so well. The bicycle had succeeded in doing what all their concerted efforts had been unable to accomplish. That shining toy had torn Mike away from his endless reading.

TONIGHT he was bubbling with plans to spend the money he had earned running errands for the corner grocer. It was his first job and already he had over $3. Apparently he meant with this sum to buy out Tiffany's to deck the women of his household.

"That's grand," she said enthusiastically. "But suppose right now you wash your face and hands for dinner."

As he dashed off, Molly, who was sitting on the window sill and languidly fanning herself shot a triumphant glance at Ellen.

"Now admit it," she commanded gayly. "You were wrong about the bicycle."

"I suppose I was," Ellen conceded. "I've certainly never seen Mike look so well."

"The best of it is he's away from that street gang now," Molly continued happily. "He's well and busy and full of fun."

"Hush, here he comes," Myra interrupted.

"Don't you think, Ellen," Molly asked quickly, slipping in a last hasty question. "That you might be wrong about other things too?"

Ellen continued to pull up the chairs. She did not answer. They gathered about the porcelain table that looked out on the fire escape and Ellen's geraniums. They talked languidly, laughed occasionally and passed back and forth the bread and butter sandwiches while outside the hot twilight slid into hot, velvety night.

"This isn't so bad," said Myra at last, yawning.

"Rather nice in fact," Ellen agreed, sipping the last drops of theiced tea.

"Do you know, I think good luck has come to us at last," Myra continued, half jestingly. "The insurance is almost paid again. Ellen's about to give up that horrible job at Dreamland and she's had a grand boost at Barclay's. Fair weather ahead."

"Certainly we'd had our share of bad luck," Molly sighed wistfully, sending a little prayer out into the night. "There can't be any more in store for us."

But there was.

At noon the next day, Mike, riding his new bicycle, was run down by a truck.
